The INs (Innovations) and the OUTs (Outcomes) of Recovery

We have the System, the CCISC, the COMPASS, and the Science. Now…how do we connect to the Service and put evidence-based services into practice?

Consistency is essential in any profession. What if information and the treatment of diabetes were different from physician to physician? What if the science never reached the service delivery? Where is the credibility with inconsistency? Why would any person follow treatment recommendations that vary so widely? How can accurate outcome studies even exist?

It is completely understandable why the treatment of psychiatric and substance disorders varies from one professional to another, from agency to agency, and from group to group, even within the same facility. Service providers often work from outdated material. Many are still trying to integrate services with lesson plans that were previously designed to treat single disorders.

Consistency is crucial. It assures that no person or family member receives less than the most accurate and most helpful information. Yet, how can professionals – already overwhelmed with high caseloads – present evidence-based integrated treatment without the tools to provide it? THE BASICS, Second Edition - combined with Study Guides, CEU Programs, Curriculum Division Examples, and Videos – is the connection between the science and the service.
